

For parents and carers
of children with autism

SIMPLE CONVERSATIONS TO KEEP YOUR CHILD SAFE FROM ABUSE

LEARN THE
UNDERWEAR RULE

TALK PANTS AND YOU'VE GOT IT COVERED!

HELPING YOU FIND THE RIGHT WORDS

The NSPCC helps parents and carers talk to their children about staying safe. It's part of our work to prevent abuse from happening to any child. And it's what this guide is all about.

Conversations, like crossing the road safely, bullying and dealing with strangers, are subjects that you and your child might talk about. But what about staying safe from sexual abuse?

It's a conversation no parent wants to have, but thankfully it doesn't have to be scary. In fact, you don't even have to mention 'sexual abuse'. Simple conversations really can help keep your child safe, and that's what – over the next few pages – we will help you do.

THE UNDERWEAR RULE

The Underwear Rule is a simple way to help keep children safe from abuse. It teaches children that their body belongs to them, they have a right to say no, and that they should tell an adult if they're upset or worried.

To help children really remember the Underwear Rule, we want to get everyone talking PANTS. Each line of PANTS covers a different part of the Underwear Rule and provides a simple but valuable lesson that can keep a child safe.

How and when you talk PANTS to your child is your choice. After all, you know them better than anyone. You'll know when they're ready and how much detail you need to go into.

This guide has everything you need to get those conversations started. Plus, the centre spread of this book is designed to be pulled out for you to use with your child when the time is right.

“ YOU CAN HELP PREVENT ABUSE.
SIMPLE CONVERSATIONS REALLY CAN KEEP CHILDREN SAFE. ”

Tips and techniques

- Don't view conversations about staying safe as a one-off. It's much better to have conversations little and often. This will help you to reinforce the key points, and to adapt the message as your child gets older.
- Once you're ready to talk, you might find your child isn't. That's OK. The most important thing is to not force the issue. The last thing you want is for your child to feel it's a big deal. Make sure you choose a time when your child is relaxed and there are no distractions. Consider the environment you are in (for example, sensory issues) to ensure your child will be able to take in the information.
- Weaving simple conversations about staying safe into the daily routine is a great way to stop it feeling like a lecture. If it feels less weird for your child, it will feel much easier for you too.
- You may need to back up conversations with visual supports to help your child's understanding. For tips visit autism.org.uk/visualsupports

TALKING PANTS

PRIVATES ARE PRIVATE

Anything covered by underwear is private. No one should ask to see or touch parts of the body covered by underwear. No one should ask your child to touch or look at parts of their body covered by underwear. If anyone tries, your child should say no.

In some situations, people – such as family members at bathtime, doctors or nurses – may need to touch your child’s private parts. Explain to your child that this is OK, but that those people should always explain why, and ask first.

ALWAYS REMEMBER YOUR BODY BELONGS TO YOU

Your child should know their body belongs to them, and no one else. No one has the right to make your child do anything with their body that makes them feel uncomfortable. If anyone tries, they should tell a trusted adult. You may need to explain what feeling ‘uncomfortable’ means, and help them identify trusted adults.

NO MEANS NO

Your child has the right to say ‘no’ – even to a family member or someone they love. This shows your child they’re in control of their body and their feelings are respected.

There are times when you may need to overrule your child’s preferences to keep them safe – like when you’re crossing the road – but it helps if you explain why. If a child feels empowered to say no to their own family, they are more likely to say no to others. Social stories could be used to explain consequences of unsafe actions. For advice visit autism.org.uk/socialstories

“ YOUR CHILD SHOULD KNOW THEIR BODY BELONGS TO THEM AND NO ONE ELSE.”

TALK ABOUT SECRETS THAT UPSET YOU

Help your child feel confident that speaking up about a secret that's worrying them won't get them into trouble. Explain the difference between 'good' and 'bad' secrets.

Some secrets, like surprise parties, can be good. But adults should never make a child keep a secret that makes them feel worried, sad or frightened. Secrets are often an abuser's greatest weapon. Phrases like "it's our little secret" are their way of making a child feel worried or scared to tell.

Help your child to feel clear and confident about what to share and when. Secrets shouldn't be kept in exchange for something, and should never make your child feel uneasy. A secret should always be shared in the end. Social stories may help to explain this.

SPEAK UP, SOMEONE CAN HELP

If your child feels sad, anxious or frightened they can talk to an adult they trust. They may initially need help identifying and naming these emotions. A trusted adult will listen, and can help stop whatever's making them upset. If they find it difficult to talk to someone about this, they could write down or draw what is worrying them. Remind your child that whatever the problem, it's not their fault and they won't get into trouble.

A trusted adult doesn't have to be a parent. It can be a teacher, an older brother or sister or a friend's parent. It can even be ChildLine or the autism helpline.

LEARN THE UNDERWEAR RULE

AND YOU'VE GOT IT COVERED!

P RIVATES
ARE PRIVATE

A LWAYS REMEMBER YOUR BODY BELONGS TO YOU

N O MEANS NO

T ALK ABOUT SECRETS
THAT UPSET YOU

S PEAK UP, SOMEONE
CAN HELP

LEARN THE UNDERWEAR RULE

TALK PANTS AND YOU'VE GOT IT COVERED!

P RIVATES ARE PRIVATE

Parts of your body covered by underwear are private. No one should ask to see or touch them. No one should ask you to touch or look at parts of their body that are covered by underwear. Sometimes doctors, nurses or family members might have to. But they should always explain why, and ask if it's OK first.

A LWAYS REMEMBER YOUR BODY BELONGS TO YOU

It's your body, no one else's. No one should make you do things that make you feel embarrassed or uncomfortable. If anyone tries, tell an adult you trust.

N O MEANS NO

You have the right to say 'no' – even to a family member or someone you love. Remember, you're in control of your body and your feelings are important.

S PEAK UP, SOMEONE CAN HELP

Talk about stuff that makes you worried or upset. An adult you trust will listen, and be able to help. It doesn't have to be a family member. It can be a teacher or a friend's parent – or even ChildLine. If you find it difficult to talk about, you could write it down or draw a picture instead.

T ALK ABOUT SECRETS THAT UPSET YOU

Secrets shouldn't make you feel upset or worried. If they do, tell an adult you trust. You will never get into trouble for sharing a secret that upsets you.

YOUR QUESTIONS ANSWERED

Why is it important to talk PANTS?

We understand that conversations like this can be difficult for both parents and children. Parents don't want to scare or upset their children, and some feel it's too soon.

That's why the Underwear Rule is important and we encourage parents and children to talk PANTS – simple conversations about staying safe.

Unfortunately, as stories in the media remind us, child sexual abuse is widespread. 90 per cent of sexually abused children were abused by someone they knew. And one in three children abused by an adult told no one else at the time.*

Research suggests that children with developmental disabilities are at an increased risk of physical and sexual abuse.

Children find it hard to speak out. By encouraging children to talk about issues earlier, providing a clear process to do this, and listening to their thoughts and feelings, parents can create the culture of openness that helps keep children safe from abuse.

Won't talking to my child about this scare them?

We believe in safe, secure childhoods – which is why the advice we're giving is practical and reassuring. We don't want to upset or scare families and we definitely don't want to make children feel they can't accept a hug or a kiss from an adult.

Feel free to use language and ideas you know your child will understand and adapt it as they get older.

*Based on NSPCC research with 11-17 year olds: Radford et al (2011) Child abuse and neglect in the UK today.

“ YOUR CHILD WILL FEEL CONFIDENT THAT THEY CAN COME TO YOU WHENEVER THEY’RE WORRIED.”

Does this mean I have to talk to my child about sex?

You don’t have to talk about sex or keeping safe from sexual abuse until you feel your child is ready. But if your child asks questions, it’s really valuable to take the opportunity to talk.

It shows that you are open to having conversations and will help your child feel confident that they can come to you whenever they’re worried. Should you wish to talk about sex with your child, more information can be found here.

What if my child says something that worries me?

If your child says something that worries you in any way, get some advice. Talk to a teacher at school or get in touch with us on 0808 800 5000. We’re here 24/7 to give advice and support.

If it’s nothing to worry about, you can feel assured that you’ve checked it out.

Remember, it’s probably a huge relief for your child to be able to talk to you. Whatever you think and feel, it’s about reacting with love, support, openness and reassurance. It’s not something to be frightened of – we can support you and help you move forward.

TALKING TIPS

Short, open and honest conversations are the best way to introduce the Underwear Rule to your child and talk about keeping safe.

Inevitably your child will have questions, so listen carefully and attentively and be straightforward in your answers.

You know your child best of all, so adapt the conversation and talk in a way that feels right for you both.

“ FIND EASY WAYS TO HAVE COMFORTABLE CHATS, LITTLE AND OFTEN. ”

Add simple conversations to your daily routine

A good tip is not to treat it like a lecture. It's much better to find easy ways to have comfortable chats, little and often.

Adding simple conversations about staying safe into your day or routine will help prevent your child from feeling like it's a big deal, unusual or weird.

It's important that you choose a time when your child is relaxed and able to take in information. Be aware of sensory issues and make sure you are in an environment without distractions such as noise, smells, stark lighting or visual stimuli, which could cause sensory overload.

FINDING THE RIGHT TIME

In the car

Car journeys can be a good opportunity to talk to your child, if they find this environment comfortable and free from distractions. However, for some children with autism this may not be the case.

To and from school

On your way to school, you can ask about who they would tell at school if something was upsetting them.

If your child has had classes about relationships or personal safety at school, for example, ask what they learned on the way home.

It's a good chance to measure your child's understanding and give you a starting point for more detailed conversations about the Underwear Rule and their safety.

“ ADD SIMPLE CONVERSATIONS TO YOUR DAILY ROUTINE.”

The bedtime routine

When you're getting your child ready for bed – or helping them tie their shoelaces – you could talk about times when a trusted adult might need to touch them.

Going swimming

You can easily adapt the Underwear Rule to bathing costumes and talk about the idea of private parts being private, so that's why they are covered.

Listening to radio or watching TV

Your child may have heard a disturbing story on the news or a favourite soap might be handling a sensitive storyline.

Though we might sometimes wish our children hadn't heard something, it's best to address the point head on rather than dismiss it or pretend it hasn't happened.

Reframe the subject in words your child would find less frightening. Also reassure them that if anyone or anything worries or upsets them, they can always talk to a trusted adult.

HOW TO TALK ABOUT KEEPING SAFE

Speak openly and honestly

If you speak honestly and in a way that makes the subject feel less shocking, your child will be more confident and comfortable in talking to you about difficult subjects. The more open and relaxed you are, the more your child will feel able to talk about anything that's worrying them.

In their own language

Use words and phrases your child will understand – don't be afraid to use the correct name for body parts. It may help to use visuals to show where body parts are or point to them to ensure clear understanding. For some children with autism, they may find it easier to write down or draw their worries, rather than talk about them. They may also need it made clear when and how they do this (for example, what feeling worried is and what to do or who to go to when they feel like this).

Give straight answers to tricky questions

Don't shy away from awkward questions – answer them as best you can, in a way that's right for your child. Remember that children with autism can be quite literal in their understanding so be aware of the wording you use, ensuring you use clear language.

“ YOUR CHILD MAY FIND IT EASIER TO WRITE OR DRAW THEIR WORRIES.”

Ask questions to check your child's understanding

Conversations about right and wrong aren't easy. Even when we talk to children about not letting people touch their private parts, we have to make exceptions such as visits to the doctor.

A great way to help children understand the grey areas is to encourage them to express their opinions and 'develop their own judgment'. For a child with autism it may help to present this visually, for example, a two-column page split into right and wrong for them to complete or ticks and crosses next to the different scenarios.

Sometimes a child with autism may give the impression they have understood something when they have not. It's important to check that they really have understood in a way appropriate to their level of understanding.

Actively listen

Use ways appropriate to your child, to show that you are listening and engaged. As a child with autism may not pick up on non-verbal cues, you may need to provide verbal cues such as repeating back what they have said or asking questions to check you have understood correctly.

Showing your child you care about what they think and how they feel means they'll be more likely to come to you if something's troubling them. You may need to provide alternatives to talking or a phrase to use, to help them know how to talk about their worries, as they may not be able to initiate this themselves. Providing structured time to talk about the day including any worries may also help.

EXTRA ADVICE FOR TALKING PANTS

Don't force the issue

If your child isn't interested in talking, don't force the issue. The last thing you want is for your child to feel it's a big deal, so wait for another opportunity at a different time. For a child with autism, there may not feel like a time when your child is interested in talking about this type of issue.

It may help to use a special interest of theirs to gain their attention and then introduce the subject through that. For example, using a favourite TV or story character.

Use books and stories

Reading a story can help you talk about difficult subjects in a way that is suitable for your child's age and can help teach them to stay safe in terms they understand. You may need to clarify exactly what 'safe' means. Social stories can be used to explain a certain situation, what to do and why for a child with autism and may be of help.

Ask your child to share with you who they can trust

Get your child to think about all the people in their life they can trust. This could be done through a written list, photos or pictures. You may need to explain what trust means; a social story may help with this.

It shows them that, even if there's any reason they can't tell you something, they should never have to keep a worry to themselves.

“ ASSURE YOUR CHILD THAT THEY CAN COME TO YOU WITH ANY QUESTIONS OR CONCERNS. ”

Tell other adults your child knows the Underwear Rule

Let any other adults who regularly care for your child know that you've spoken about the Underwear Rule.

Your child may ask them follow up questions, so it will help the other adults to reinforce the same messages.

Keep the conversation going as they grow

Remember to keep the lines of communication open with your child and assure them that they can come to you with any question or concern.

As they grow up, they will have more questions and more capacity to understand these issues.

Having that openness and knowing a clear process to communicate their concerns means your child will feel comfortable talking and sharing worries with the family as they get older.

TALK TO US

You can find lots of further information and support on the Underwear Rule, as well as talking and listening techniques, at nspcc.org.uk/underwear

If you ever need to talk, contact us. We're here 24/7. Call 0808 800 5000 or send one of our counsellors a message at nspcc.org.uk/help

If you're a child and you're finding it difficult to talk to an adult you trust, ChildLine can help. We're free, we're ready to listen, and we can help you find the right words. Call us on 0800 1111 or visit us online at childline.org.uk

For confidential advice and support on autism you can also contact The National Autistic Society helpline on 0808 800 4104. Lines are open Monday to Friday between 10am-4pm. To find out more visit autism.org.uk/helpline

The Underwear Rule

nspcc.org.uk/underwear

NSPCC

0808 800 5000

nspcc.org.uk/help

ChildLine

0800 1111

childline.org.uk

Autism Helpline

0808 800 4104

autism.org.uk/helpline

DO YOU KNOW ABOUT THE UNDERWEAR RULE?

It's a simple way to have conversations with your child about staying safe.

We've created this guide for parents of children with autism. It will help you talk to your child about their body, and what to do if they're made to feel uncomfortable.

nspcc.org.uk/underwear